SPRING 2026

Honoring Our Educators & Supporting Their Financial Futures

During the first full week of May (May 4–8, 2026) we celebrate National Teacher Appreciation Week, with National Teacher Appreciation Day on Tuesday, May 5. This annual observance recognizes the dedication, passion, and lasting impact educators have on students, families, and communities.

Teachers do far more than deliver lessons. They inspire confidence, encourage curiosity, and help shape the future by often going above and beyond what the job description requires. While this week is a time for gratitude, it's also an opportunity to reflect on how we support educators not only professionally but also personally and financially.

Caring for Others Starts with Caring for Yourself

Educators are natural caregivers. Many spend their days focused on helping students succeed, while putting their own needs last. Long-term financial planning can easily fall into that category: something to “get to later.”

But financial well-being is an important part of overall wellness. Having a plan in place can reduce stress, create stability, and provide peace of mind allowing educators to focus on what they do best.

Understanding Your 403(b) and 457(b) Benefits

As an employee, you may have access to 403(b) and/or 457(b) retirement plans designed specifically for public education employees and public sector professionals. These plans can be powerful tools for building retirement savings, especially when used thoughtfully over time.

Taking time to understand questions like these can make a meaningful difference:

- Am I contributing enough to meet my long-term goals?
- How do my 403(b) and 457(b) plans work together (if applicable)?
- Do my investment selections align with my time horizon and comfort level?
- How does my retirement strategy fit with other life goals?

You don't need all the answers at once. Progress often begins with awareness and small, informed steps.

Planning Is About Choices, Not Pressure

Financial planning is not about having everything perfect. It's about creating options for the future, whether that's retiring with confidence, reducing financial stress, preparing for life changes, or simply knowing you have a plan.

During Teacher Appreciation Week, we encourage educators to take a moment, just for themselves, to review their benefits, reflect on their goals, and seek out educational resources available to them.

A Meaningful Way to Say “Thank You”

We are grateful for the commitment, compassion, and impact educators bring every day. Supporting financial well-being is one more way to recognize the important role teachers and supporting staff play both in shaping others' futures and securing their own.
